40' Steel Autocars for SP, UP, SL-SW, B&O, IC

From the advent of the automobile, the railroads strove to accommodate their special needs of shipment by rail. Car heights were increased and doors widened. When racks which stacked automobiles were developed, the railroads quickly adopted them to increase auto density. Auto traffic represented a prized lading worth extra competitive effort. Thus, when the AAR introduced the 1937 40' all steel design of a standard boxcar, the railroads quickly adapted the concept to haul automobiles.
